SIP2GO will be at PCPL from April 15 - July 17.

Science in Play2Go is the mobile version of Kentucky Science Center’s progressive next-generation learning experience. It empowers children and adults to learn together, and for life, all through the power of play.

Designed specifically for children ages 8 and under, Science in Play2Go is built around the twin concepts of open-ended play and “loose parts” – materials that can be reimaged in countless ways – allowing children to naturally develop 21st century learning and STEAM skills.

With key elements that embody the philosophies behind the Science Center’s permanent exhibit, Science in Play2Go will visit libraries across Kentucky for 3-month residencies at no cost to libraries for their visitors.

The traveling exhibit is open to the community free of charge.

Science in Play2Go is made possible with support from PNC Grow Up Great, and in partnership with the Kentucky Department of Libraries and Archives.

Blue Blocks: Large blue foam blocks that invite children to build and create structures both real and fantastical.

Shapes and Stuff Store: A unique shopping experience that involves dramatic play while learning shapes, colors, patterns and more.

Ball Fall: A large Velcro wall with tubular track pieces and spinning wheels that challenge small hands to construct a pathway for small colorful rubber balls to travel.

Science Depot: The most programming intensive piece, this experience is based on the tried and true model of Explore, Create, & Share. Topics change weekly, and children are provided with the opportunity to be little scientists and learn about an array of topics.

Light Brite: A large wall, with colored pegs that appear to light up when inserted, allows children to explore their creativity while making pictures and patterns with light.
